I support students through positive encouragement, honesty, and openness to foster a supportive environment where they are informed and receive high quality online educational experiences. I mentor and coach them throughout their journey, building supportive relationships as they strive to reach their educational goals.
JOHN BELISLE

What excites me about teaching is the opportunity to share my knowledge, practical experience, and passion for justice studies. By bridging theory and practice I hope to strengthen the students’ resolve to pursue a career in the justice field. My energy is renewed every time I see students become changemakers.

Excellent educators get to know their students. Not just on day one, but through each assignment or activity. Learning what students like to do outside of class can make math applications more interesting. It is amazing how much learning is going on when they can apply class topics to their own life.
Hard wired into my teaching is the concept of active learning. Students learn the principles of critical thinking and peacebuilding and then capture a personal and emotional connection to the subject. They are provided multiple opportunities to apply the learning in their lives and communities.
Valuing the varied backgrounds of our students allows us to assist them not only academically, but also on a personal level with skills and issues beyond the scope of our courses. My inspiration comes from my students' life experiences. We do not step into the same classroom twice - every class presents new challenges and unveils new possibilities. I enjoy creating a supportive environment for my students by fostering their potentials and helping them overcome their challenges and achieve academic success.
There is nothing more rewarding and powerful than holistically helping students achieve their academic and personal goals in life. Their success is their family, friends, and communities’ success. Legacy is more than biology; it is the positive impact of life lessons that inspires and guides students beyond the walls of a college.

MORGAN COMMUNITY COLLEGE
One of the things I try to impart to my students is the importance of serving others to benefit society. Providing students with opportunities to volunteer using their newly developed knowledge and skills are the most rewarding aspects of my career.
My motivation in teaching is in looking at what each student might become. Everyone has a different story and being a part of it is a great privilege that comes with an equally great responsibility.
Students are my motivation and inspiration. My joy comes from watching them cross the graduation stage. In that moment, I am reminded that all the time advising and supporting them through difficult times was worth it. When we keep our focus on students, their success increases and so does ours.
JESSICA TRUSTY

Own your failures as well as your successes. Learn from your mistakes and move on. As Pat Summitt says, "A sense of ownership is the most powerful weapon a team or organization can have."
